Peter Connolly is a poacher turned gamekeeper.

In 2015, he founded Toro after an early career in the UK military and then in corporate security. He created the UK's first Red Team penetration testing approach by blending physical intrusion (burglary), hacking (ethically) and social engineering (tricking people). Using the blended approach, Peter and his team attacked hundreds of clients to expose gaps in their cyber, physical and people security, before helping them better defend themselves. Building on its core offering, Toro now delivers a range of managed services and consultancy to help private and governmental clients protect, prepare, and respond to modern blended threats.

Peter is an active Trustee of two military charities and in 2017 he co-founded a non-profit called TechVets which has supported over 6,000 UK military veterans and their partners with training and careers in tech and cyber.
